PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

University of Washington School of Law, Seattle, WA (1994 - current)

Charles I. Stone Professor of Law: Teach a variety of health law and related courses developed to form the foundation for multidisciplinary health law program and administer health law related teaching and research ventures.

- Direct and Administer Center for Law in Science and Global Health and the health law concentration track in J.D. program. Through this center, we offer a health law concentration track, and engage in multidisciplinary collaboration in teaching and research initiatives
- Teach core law school courses and develop and teach health law courses at the law school; also teach law, policy and medical ethics to public health, health sciences, medical and nursing students. From 1994 through 2005, I developed and/or taught the following courses: Torts; Health Care Finance and Regulation; Medical Malpractice; Topics in Law and Medicine; Beginning and End of Life: Rights and Choices; Disability Law; Law and Biotechnology; Law and Genetics; Public Health Law; Health and Human Rights; Medical Ethics and Jurisprudence; Ethical, Legal and Social Issues in Public Health Genetics; Health Law (for undergraduates); Individual Rights: A Comparative Study of the US and EU (UW Rome Summer Session, Law/LSJ course) and Medical Malpractice and Products Liability (for Vytautas Magnus University, Lithuania).
- Actively engage in funded research serving as the PI/Co-PI on three major NIH grants and as a Co-investigator on several others. These projects provide students and faculty with directed research opportunities over and above our JD and graduate education programs.
- Collaborate and actively participate in the teaching and research mission of the Northwest Center for Public Health Practice, the Center for Genomic and Healthcare Equality, and two NIH Fogarty International Center Research Grant Programs.
- Research and write on: the effect of law and regulation upon medical care; access to health services; health care organizations; health care financing and reimbursement; international health and human rights, genetics and the law, health insurance fraud and abuse; international and domestic research ethics; scientific misconduct; and evolving law and ethics with respect to biotechnology.

Director of Multidisciplinary Initiatives (2005-2007): Facilitate multidisciplinary collaborations and initiatives with other University schools and departments, and further research mission of Law School faculty.

Associate Dean for Research and Faculty Development (2002-2005): Coordinate administration of Graduate Law programs and centers, facilitate multidisciplinary collaborations and initiatives with other University schools and departments, and further research mission of Law School faculty.

University of Washington School of Medicine, Seattle, WA (1994 - current)

Adjunct Professor, Department of Medical History and Ethics: periodically teach Medical Ethics and Jurisprudence and Research Ethics courses aimed at graduate medical ethics, health sciences and law students.

University of Washington School of Public Health, Seattle, WA (1996 - current)

Adjunct Professor: Teach a variety of public health law courses in the Department of Health Services, the Health Administration Program and Institute for Public Health Genetics.

- Member of multidisciplinary core group of faculty that proposed, created, obtained funding for, and implemented multidisciplinary “Public Health Genetics” graduate program offering M.P.H., M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in Public Health Genetics. I was one of the authors of the grant and continue to play a major role in designing and maintaining the curricula, teaching three of the core courses, reviewing admissions, and serving on MPH thesis and Ph.D. dissertation committees.

Hogan & Hartson, Washington, D.C. (1991-1994)

Associate Attorney: Practiced law focusing on health, regulatory and policy issues.

- Provided advice and counsel to managed care entities, insurer/health plans, hospital systems, academic health centers, medical device and pharmaceutical manufacturers, and professional associations.
- Monitored federal and state legislation related to health care regulation and reform for numerous clients.

Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Connecticut, North Haven, CT (1988-1991)

Medical Director: Provided medical direction for major health insurer with multiple lines of business including several alternative health delivery systems.

- Developed medical and utilization management policies and cost containment programs for inclusion in various health care benefit plans.
- Conducted final determinations for payment on complex and/or disputed health insurance coverage and reimbursement questions and claims, underwriting decisions, and managed benefits determinations.
- Evaluated physician and provider fraud and abuse cases for payment integrity division.

Meriden-Wallingford Hospital (now Mid-State Medical Center), Meriden, CT (1984-1987)

Director of Emergency Services: Managed the operation of emergency services facility with 31,000 patient visits annually, staff of 40 health care professionals, and annual budget of $2.2 million. In addition, directed Regional Emergency Services system providing pre-hospital medical care to a population of 600,000 in 20 townships.
