Clinical Law Program: Student Information

Why participate in a clinic?

Clinics help students find the passion necessary for a satisfying legal career, provide context for students’ classroom studies, and teach the many skills necessary for competent lawyering.

Clinics teach professional skills that are transferable to many settings: interviewing and counseling clients, negotiating, developing facts, drafting legal documents and policy analyses, preparing for and performing trials, and appeals work. They also gain expertise in areas that are becoming increasingly important in today’s legal practice, including collaboration, meeting facilitation and how to work in a multidisciplinary environment.

EXTERNSHIPS

Through externships, students get out of the classroom and work in the field, handling real legal work under the supervision of an attorney-mentor. Students develop legal skills and substantive knowledge of the law in an applied setting. Externships offer students valuable field experience that significantly enhances their resumes and increases their employability.
