

Acknowledgment of the University of Washington School of Law Honor Code and the University of Washington Student Conduct Code

A lawyer is expected to live up to the standards of skills and conduct established by the ABA and state law. It is fitting therefore that in training to become a lawyer a law student is expected to live up to a similar standard. Skill alone does not make a lawyer. Honor and integrity play an important part in the making of a lawyer. An honor code is a means of helping mature and responsible law students work in an atmosphere of mutual confidence and trust.

All students attending the School of Law are bound by the School of Law Honor Code and the University of Washington Student Conduct Code. All law students also have a continuing obligation to disclose to the Academic Dean any and all circumstances and events occurring after the date of submission of their law school application through the date of their graduation which may bear on their character and fitness to practice law.

Responsibility for understanding and observing the Honor Code and Student Conduct Code is placed directly on each student.

I understand that I am bound by the Honor Code and the University of Washington Student Conduct Code. I understand that I am also bound by the Academic Policies and Procedures, posted on the law school web site, that support these two documents.

I acknowledge that I have been given a copy of the School of Law Honor Code and Student Conduct Code and/or provided directions on where to find these documents on the Law School web site. I also acknowledge that academic policies may be updated from time-to-time. It is my responsibility to review changes as communicated through email or other official publications.

I further attest that I have reviewed the provisions of the Honor Code and Student Conduct Code and that I understand that it is my responsibility to seek guidance if I have any questions whether an action is unethical or a violation of these codes.
